

Subscribe to BostonGlobe.com for only 99¢. Stay up-to-date on breaking news in New England and beyond.

SUBSCRIBE LOG IN

The Boston Globe

NEWS	▶	METRO
LOTTERY	▶	OBITUARIES	▶
GLOBE NORTH	▶	GLOBE SOUTH	▶
GLOBE WEST	▶	DATA DESK	▶
MAGAZINE	▶	INSIDERS	▶
TODAY'S PAPER	▶

Profiles of a city healing and recovering a year after the attack

The finish line, one year later

DINA RUDICK/GLOBE STAFF

INTERACTIVE PHOTO

One year, one city

On April 15, 2013, their lives intersected at the Marathon. One year later, they returned to the scene for a historic photo shoot.

Video: Behind the scenes

Inside the making of the photo shoot at the Marathon finish line, one year later.

More photos from the shoot

More than 200 people affected by the bombing posed for a group portrait.

April 15 — Remembrances and tributes

Last Viewed by First Circuit Library on 05/01/2015

1

2

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

CHARLES KRUPA/AP

SLIDE 1 OF 11

◀

▶

A flag was raised at the Boston Marathon finish line to honor the victims of the bombings.

A year later, Boston pauses to remember

In a series of moving tributes, Boston marked a year since the Marathon bombings.

Respects are paid at Marathon finish line

At the site of the Marathon blasts on Boylston Street, people paused to pay their respects.

Marathon victims' families attend brief, quiet ceremony

During the morning ceremony, the sister and brother of Martin Richard placed a wreath on a stand in front of the Forum Restaurant.

Videos: Remembrances and tributes

A year after the Marathon bombings, Boston paused to reflect and honor the victims.

Around the city, a pause to remember and honor

As church bells tolled at 2:49 p.m. Tuesday, many in the city stopped to mark the moment.

Return to bombing site eases sadness of Globe photographer John Tlumacki

John Tlumacki captured harrowing photographs at the bombing site a year ago.

One year later, Stoneham's Norden brothers travel Marathon route

Liz Norden, whose sons each lost a leg, said the first anniversary symbolizes a new start for the family.

The wounded and the recovering

JOHN TLUMACKI/GLOBE STAFF

A year since Marathon attacks, many of wounded struggle

What remains for many of the victims are relentless injuries nobody sees.

■ Marathon bombings, one year later

Emotional impact of attack runs deep, wide in Boston

A year after the Marathon bombings, much about the city looks and feels as it long has, but nothing is really quite the same.

Marathon bombing anxiety likely to return in children

Those directly affected are most likely to have nightmares, or to feel sad in the next several days, mental health specialists caution.

The Richard family - Part 1 of 2

PART ONE OF TWO

For Richard family, loss and love

They had to be in that Boylston Street crowd on Marathon Day, cheering passing runners. The horror that followed, and their quiet courage in the face of it, will bind Boston's hearts to theirs, forever.

- 📷 Photos: The Richard family
- 🎥 Video: Long road for the Richard family

- Part two: Finding strength

The Richard family - Part 2 of 2

PART TWO OF TWO

For Richard family, finding strength

It had been 10 weeks of hospitals and surgeries, of therapy and slow recovery, of fearful memories and inklings of hope. And now it was time for the Richards to go home.

- Part one: Loss and love
-  Photos: The Richard family
-  Video: A long road

The Watertown shootout

Carjacking victim describes his life one year after Tsarnaev encounter

For 75 minutes that began on April 18, 2013, he feared for his life, a prisoner in his own Mercedes, held at gunpoint by Tamerlan Tsarnaev.

-  Video: Danny on the anniversary
- 4/26/13: Carjacking victim describes harrowing night
- Special section: One year later

For Watertown residents, normal will never be quite the same

A lingering strangeness remains in the strangers snapping pictures of the famous driveway and in memories that are inescapable.

One year later, officer's recovery continues

A year after MBTA Transit Police officer Richard Donohue was shot in the frenzied shootout, he remains plagued by persistent pain and is unable to work.

Video

VIDEO

Globe documentary: '5 Runners'

VIDEO

Five Days in April

Race director outlines what to expect at 2014 Marathon

VIDEO

Marathon Sports employee recalls bombing

Opinion

The overlooked part of exercise — recovery

OPINION | DENNIS LEHANE
Library wasn't the target — what was inside was

JOANNA WEISS
He who should be named

THE PODIUM
Boston's trauma teams were ready

THOMAS GAGEN
Mistakes in Watertown

KEVIN CULLEN
A year later, the resilience of optimism

EDITORIAL
Bombings proved

ADRIAN WALKER
UMass Dartmouth still

Boston was always strong healing

More coverage

Inclusive spirit reassures
Muslims

Collier remembered in Cambridge

Flash mob sings in celebration of Boston's strength

Marathon bombing
survivors say a heartfelt thank you

Amid chaos near finish line, bond was forged

Medford to honor
Krystle Campbell with memorial garden

COVERAGE

The 2014 Boston Marathon

SPECIAL SECTION

The Boston Marathon bombings

Learn more

SUBSCRIBE BOSTON GLOBE INSIDERS EPAPER EDITION NEWS IN EDUCATION

MY ACCOUNT

LOG IN MANAGE MY ACCOUNT
DOWNLOAD CUSTOMER SERVICE APP

SOCIAL

FACEBOOK
TWITTER
GOOGLE+

CONTACT

HELP
FAQS
GLOBE NEWSROOM
ADVERTISEMENT

MORE

ARCHIVES
PRIVACY POLICY
TERMS OF SERVICE
TERMS OF PURCHASE
YOUR AD CHOICES
WORK AT BOSTON GLOBE MEDIA